(Buy two anyway) teaches about hardware errors as well as software. is much more than just Arduino, and the simulation process will only simulate the circuit that I believe, not all Arduino functionality as I was looking for ... Empower your future customers with the world's easier online teaching, coaching and easier marketing platform. And I think it is a better learning experience using real hardware - if you receive a finished design, and then set trying to build it, you prepare for a difficult learning curve, you did not do the BÅ Hardware. I totally agree with you. Maybe this is good, maybe it's a crap.) (Edit2: terrible to use it. So the chances are lower to burn things or buy useless components. Abnd The hardware to get is so The cheap! No reason to get around the real thing. They are substantially more expensive than a clone nano. I found this with good options: Windows Report - Free Error Technology Life - December 16, Are the best arduino simulators for pc? nano clones are that, $ 3? You will want some extra bits carefully selected. If you are impeccable, this is a reasonable excuse not to buy the "Genuan article" are five times the price or more, but the experience of most of us who have a good 5 v regulatory supplies is that the clones (especially from Alice) are quite trustable. As stated above, a small creative search on eBay and Aliexpress had nanos at $ 3 each. I am looking for this to have My project working 1st in the virtual world, before buying everything need. Imnotgoku: But for an unemployed guy in a 3rd country country, it became a little expensive and also a long time consuming to expect any purchase on the internet. There are not really a substitute to do this in the real. So with a good reason I am very insecure, I would like to know if there is a good, free and Linux OS simulator of Arduino, is there any good?
